CowParade, the world's largest public art exhibition, is now taking place in Ireland. CowParade features life sized fibreglass cows which artists paint, decorate, and in some cases sculpt, into wonderful pieces of art for the public to enjoy.

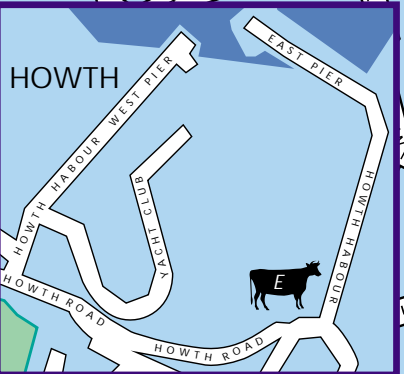

CowParade is a global phenomenon which has taken place in London, New York, Sydney, Boston, Heuston, Zurich, Chicago and Latvia. CowParade has also raised millions for charity worldwide, because at the end of each parade, the cows are "rounded up" and auctioned off for charity. The two Irish charities benefiting from CowParade Ireland are The Jack and Jill Foundation, which works to support severely handicapped children and their families, and the Dublin Simon Community, a voluntary group which works and campaigns for the homeless.

CowParade Ireland has been hailed as one of the most successful cow parades in the world, with a highly impressive collection of Irish art on display, including works from John Rocha, Louise Kennedy, Robert Ballagh, Felim Egan, Deborah Donnelly, Terry Bradley, Ronnie Woods, Gavin Friday and Andrea Corr. The cows are on parade in Dublin and can be viewed at the locations detailed on this map up until the auction, which takes place on Thursday 25th September 2003.
